

About Christina Martel Speaker, Broker, Author

Christina had a long career in High Technology when in 2004 she shifted her focus and began working with her son to help people with their Medical insurance and Medicare needs. Along the way she discovered that many of her clients knew nothing about how money worked, putting them into debt and approaching financial ruin.

Christina's passion became to educate her clients about the three silent enemies obstructing the path between their financial starting point and their personal finish line – inflation, debt and taxes – without losing a dime of their money along the way. Christina feels that the most expeditious way to educate this group is through speaking...thus a new phase of her business was born.
